

posed to be that it was a better protection from injury than the old suits and furnished less hold to the tackler of the other side.

HOW THEY LINED UP.

When the two eleven lined up it was found that Stevenson was Harvard's right end, playing against Yale's captain, Hinkley, instead of Blanchard, who was expected to fill the place. Here are the two teams:

WELCOMING THE YALE MEN.

The band of Yale men appeared at 2:30 o'clock and was likewise greeted with loud cheers. The players wore their usual dingy-looking canvas suits, with blue jerseys and stockings. There was preliminary practice by both sides, and at 2:47 o'clock play was begun. Yale, having won the toss, gave Harvard the field and took the north goal, thus having the benefit of the strong north wind. Harvard at once set in as if the worst predictions of her admirers were not overdrawn. In the initial play, Stevenson, Waters and Brewer stood in line about ten yards behind and five yards to the left of the left end of their team. Beale, the quarterback, would clap his hands, and the four would run together at the Yale line. In the mean time, the ball had gone to Wrightington or to one of the rushers, and he had ploughed ahead with it through the centre or between Yale's left guard and tackle. The four flying figures at first disconcerted the men in blue, but they soon learned to checkmate the move pretty well. Harvard employed the manoeuvre frequently through the game, however. Yale had a similar trick, in which three men made the rush, but she tried this only three or four times.

With the ball thus so dangerously near the Yale goal, Harvard lost it on four downs, and Butterworth punted. There was a good deal of kicking in this half, and Yale's advantage at this was marked. Not only did she have the wind with her, but Butterworth showed greater skill than Brewer, thus reversing the state of affairs of a year ago. Still the Yale football's punting was at times mediocre.

The play was occasionally ragged. Yale worked the ball into the south end of the field, where it remained nearly half an hour. Then Harvard transferred the scene of the war to Yale's ground, but the half ended with the ball on Harvard's thirty-yard line.

PRETTY WOMEN IN THE CROWD. The Harvard adherents were less cheerful. They had expected a swift victory, but their rivals had more than held their own. The intermission was spent in talking over the situation and in admiring the hands of a party of girls who were scattered in the crowd. Many and he managed to cover twenty-five yards before the Yale line could stop that rush.

HARVARD GAINS.

It was a clever play, and the Harvard side of the field made an awful noise. Two tries were made around the right for a couple of yards, and Brewer went through the centre for five, and Wrightington repeated this play for five more.

Harvard tried a solid mass play against Yale's centre for a short gain, and the ball was on Yale's fifteen-yard line, and the Harvard following were screaming with delight.

Captain Hinkley then rallied his forces, and Yale met Harvard's rushes pound for pound. Harvard losing the ball on downs. Butterworth thought that the ball was too near the Yale goal, and he punted, but only fairly. With such a wind the ball ought to have gone twice the distance. Wrightington recovered five yards, and he tried Hinkley's end for two more. Wrightington made five more, and with the ball in the centre of the field, Harvard lost it on downs, and the Yale men had a chance to shoot.

Yale made no gain on the second down, and only two yards on the third, and the ball was passed back for a kick. Butterworth did well this time, sending the ball spinning to Harvard's ten-yard line. Brewer's return punt was poor, and when the ball was brought back it rested on Harvard's thirty-yard line. Thorne got through for ten yards, and two short gains by Butterworth and Thorne carried the ball to Harvard's fifteen-yard line, when Harvard got the ball. Wrightington fumbled, but Waters fell on the ball and Brewer was again called upon to punt, he sending the ball to the thirty-five-yard line.

FIGHTING HARD.

Harvard was now fighting desperately, and so was Yale. Brewer and Butterworth exchanged punts, the latter kick being by far the better of the two, although the wind behind Butterworth helped him materially. The ball was now on Har-

NORTH AND SOUTH FIGHT FOR LAURELS.

LEHIGH DEFEATS THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ON MANHATTAN FIELD.

Lehigh University and the University of North Carolina, the North against the South, played football on the Manhattan Field yesterday. Lehigh won easily by a score of 21 to 0, but the boys from the Southland put up a plucky game. The style of play was against them. They were out of the centre all the time and seemed not to understand the utility of end plays. Consequently their defensive work was weak in this respect as well as their offensive play. The long trip to this city probably also told against the North Carolina boys.

Lehigh had not scored in this city before for three years when the college defeated Columbia, but the general standing of the team is well-known. There was a large crowd present to see the game, and the weather conditions were fine. A large party came from Bethlehem to see the game, and the Lehigh Club, of this city, decorated one of the stands with boughs and white. There was also a following of the University of North Carolina boys.

The teams looked to be about evenly matched. They lined up as follows:

Lehigh.	Position.	U. of N. C.
Flint	Left end	Gibson
Flint	Right end	Gibson
Flint	Left tackle	Pugh
Flint	Right tackle	Pugh
Flint	Left guard	Murphy
Flint	Right guard	Murphy
Flint	Left halfback	Kirkpatrick
Flint	Right halfback	Kirkpatrick
Flint	Left fullback	Full
Flint	Right fullback	Full
Flint	Left wing	Whedon
Flint	Right wing	Whedon
Flint	Left back	Whedon
Flint	Right back	Whedon

The Lehigh players won the toss and took the goal with the wind in their favor. North Carolina formed a wedge, but lost the ball on the first down through a fumble. Floyd, of Lehigh, then made two pretty runs, and made a field goal for the first half. North Carolina's goal. The goal was kicked by Floyd.

North Carolina made a game field goal as soon as the ball was put in play and forced Lehigh back to its five-yard line. There Lehigh made a desperate stand and secured possession of the ball. Whedon was hurt and gave way for Keenan.

Roderick, for Lehigh, made thirty yards around the end. Both sides kicked and North Carolina got the ball. The playing was sharp in the centre of the field for twenty minutes. Roderick showed some excellent work for Lehigh, and made another touchdown for Lehigh after a double pass, which seemed to puzzle the North Carolina boys. Floyd kicked the goal.

Roderick, Floyd and Ordway made long runs around North Carolina's end, Ordway scoring. The third goal was kicked and scored for the first half closed, Lehigh 12, University of North Carolina 0.

The second half was about a repetition of the first. Lehigh continued to play the effective end game and her backs made long runs. When North Carolina had the ball it would play for the centre and fall in such a manner or lose the ball on a fumble. Lehigh scored 10 points in the second half. The total score was: Lehigh 34, University of North Carolina 0. Max Forand, of Princeton, was referee. Mr. Stratton, of Cornell, was umpire.

LIVELY SCENES AT THE COLLEGE CLUBS.

Many college graduates who were not fortunate enough to be in the line of the 7th Regiment were held in the college clubs. The University Athletic Club, in Twenty-sixth-st., had the best facilities to get the story of the game while the play was on. The club secured a special wire to Springfield for the latest news, and had a wire run from the Springfield office directly to the grounds. Henry Stanford Brooks, the former Yale runner, had charge of the arrangements and telephoned the story of each play to the clubhouse in this city. W. J. Parquhar and William W. Wainwright received the story here. A large chair of the football field was placed in a conspicuous place, and as the ball was placed on the field to show how the game stood. There were 250 or 300 enthusiasts present, representing both Harvard and Yale, and there was a cheering for whichever side appeared to have a temporary advantage.

The returns at the University Athletic Club were taken to the University Club and displayed to an eager crowd of members.

During the latter part of the evening most of the college clubs presented lively scenes. Those who had been to the game began to get back about 10 o'clock, and they exhausted what little voice they had left in explaining how the game was lost and won, and in giving horse hot current cheer for their favorite college.

The Yale men were naturally most in evidence. They did all of the dancing and handshaking and congratulating. A few Harvard men were to be seen courageously wearing their crimson colors, but their faces were long, and their actions were undemonstrative. At the Harvard House in Twenty-second-st. everything was still a grave. A dozen or fifteen Harvard men gathered at the house in the afternoon, but slowly stole away after the return was in.

It was a Yale night. The hearts of Yale's graduates, young and old, were glad, and they made merry until a late hour.

SCORE OF COMPANY I OF THE 7TH REGIMENT.

The trophy match of the season between Companies I and I of the 7th Regiment was held on Thursday, and resulted in a score of 34 for Company I and 30 for Company B. The score of the winning team was two points better than the record. The following was the score:

REJOICING GREATLY AT PRINCETON.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 25.—News of a Yale victory was received with enthusiasm here. The news was awaited with an interest that could only have been surpassed had the home team been in the field. If Harvard had defeated Yale, a Princeton victory on Thanksgiving would have been added of half its sweetness, while defeat might have been a bitter pill.

EMBRYO PHYSICIANS WIN THE BATTLE.

The embryo doctors of the College of Physicians and Surgeons and of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College did a pretty dangerous thing yesterday, especially for men who were not well trained. They played a game of football at the Polo grounds. Of course, it is not presumed that they could have patched up any fallen comrade without waiting for a "sanatorium" to come from the crowd, and so, perhaps, it wasn't so dangerous after all. At any rate, nobody was hurt. The College of Physicians and Surgeons won by a score of 6 to 4.

SWARTHMORE, 50; Haverford, 6.

Haverford, Penn., Nov. 25 (Special).—Fully 1,000 people came to Haverford to witness the annual game of football between the rival Quaker colleges, Haverford and Swarthmore. It was a long and close contest, but Swarthmore won, the only question being how many points they would score. Swarthmore had her best team in the field and had the better team play. Haverford was minus the support of three of her best men; the full back Lester sprained his ankle last week; Alcock had his knee twisted and was unable to play; Swarthmore's team was the victor.

WEST POINT MEN DISABLED.

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 25 (Special).—It is feared that the Army will have to play in the coming week with an handicap on account of severe injuries received in today's practice game. The loss of both halfbacks will seriously cripple the team. Shelton, who plays in Springfield's place, is doing fairly good work, but is not a good player. The West Point team is not a very strong team, and during the rest of the game Hinkley and his men played on the defensive.

A TIE GAME AT LAWRENCEVILLE.

Lawrenceville, N. J., Nov. 25.—The 200 spectators who braved the cold wind which blew across the football field were amply repaid for their trouble by seeing one of the best games ever played here. The game was a tie, the last one of the season, and as Princeton, '97, and Lawrenceville had not been defeated, a close game was expected, and so it proved to be, for when time was called each side had scored a touchdown and kicked a goal. Lawrenceville started with the ball and by excellent playing worked it to Princeton's twenty-yard line, but here a stand was made by the freshmen and the ball
